

THE DAILY QUEST

ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO IGNORE

LOCAL NEWS

TEEN DISCOVERS PHONE CAN BE TURNED OFF

Device survives full eleven-minute shutdown; household officials call result 'promising but preliminary.'

BY THE DAILY QUEST NEIGHBORHOOD DESK

A local teenager has confirmed that a mobile phone can be turned completely off and, under controlled conditions, turned back on again.

The discovery was made Wednesday at 4:17 p.m., when the device reached three per cent battery and the nearest charger was reportedly 'all the way upstairs.' Rather than make the journey, the teenager held down a side button and selected POWER OFF.

'The screen went black, which was concerning,' the teenager said. 'But then the room was still there.'

Family members observed the subject walk to the kitchen, open the refrigerator and remain there for approximately 46 seconds. No photograph of the refrigerator was taken.

During the shutdown, the teenager also heard a lawn mower, located one missing sock and asked a complete follow-up question during a conversation.

After eleven minutes, the phone restarted without loss of followers, streaks or social standing. A household spokesperson cautioned that the findings have not yet been replicated on a weekend.

The device has since been returned to normal operation. The teenager described the experiment as 'fine, I guess' and declined to rule out another shutdown.

IAB CAMPUS

IAB BACKYARD FIELD TRIP RETURNS WITH ALL STUDENTS ACCOUNTED FOR

Expedition travelled 24 metres beyond the patio and identified several forms of grass.

BY MILES PATHWAY, OUTDOOR AFFAIRS

The Institute of Applied Boredom has completed its most ambitious backyard field trip to date, sending a full class beyond the patio furniture and into what faculty described as 'the wider lawn.'

Students were issued clipboards, juice boxes and strict instructions not to cross the mysterious boundary behind the shed.

'We encountered a beetle, two dandelions and a stick with unusual potential,' said one participant. 'The stick is being studied.'

The expedition paused at 10:42 a.m. when a sprinkler activated without warning. Faculty classified the event as weather.

All students returned before lunch carrying one observation and considerably more dirt than they had left with. The Institute confirmed that next term's itinerary may include the front yard.

TRANSPORTATION

SCENIC ROUTE HOME ADDS 12 MINUTES, REMOVES MOST OF BAD MOOD

Driver ignores fastest-route instruction and arrives with three trees to report.

BY MARJORIE CLIPBOARD, MUNICIPAL CORRESPONDENT

A resident arrived home twelve minutes late Wednesday after deliberately taking the scenic route, an unauthorized detour that reportedly improved the remainder of the evening.

The route included a narrow road, a row of red maples and one hill that served no practical transportation purpose.

'My phone kept asking me to turn around,' the driver said. 'Eventually it gave up and recalculated my personality.'

Transportation analysts confirmed that the longer route used slightly more fuel but contained 300 per cent more cows and no merging for nearly six kilometres.

Upon arrival, the resident remained in the parked car until the song ended - a further delay described by officials as avoidable but understandable.

The fastest route remains available for emergencies, appointments and Thursdays that already feel too long.

CAFE DESK

COFFEE CONSUMED WITHOUT PHONE; ENTIRE CUP REMEMBERED

Witness reports beverage was hot, slightly bitter and accompanied by an actual window.

BY RUTH REEL, ARTS AND SNACKS EDITOR

A cafe customer drank an entire coffee without checking a phone Tuesday, allowing the beverage to become the main event for the first time since approximately 2014.

The phone remained inside a coat pocket while the customer noticed steam, music and another person trying to fold a newspaper.

'At first I thought I had forgotten something,' the customer said. 'Then I realized I was just drinking coffee.'

Cafe staff confirmed the cup was finished before it became cold. No email was answered, no headline was half-read and no table was photographed from above.

The customer later described the break as surprisingly long despite lasting only nine minutes.

Management has declined to designate the table a digital-free heritage site, but said anyone may attempt the procedure while supplies last.

THE DAILY ASSIGNMENT

OPERATION: THE WRONG WAY HOME

Your route home has become too efficient.

Today, choose a safe, familiar alternative that adds 10 to 20 minutes. Take a different street, walk one extra block, get off one stop early, or circle the long way through a public place.

The objective is not to get lost. The objective is to notice what the fastest route keeps editing out.

FIELD NOTES

- ONE THING YOU HAVE NEVER NOTICED
- ONE PLACE WORTH RETURNING TO
- ONE DETAIL THE MAP DID NOT MENTION

PROOF REQUIRED: NONE

REPORT TO: NOBODY

Take only public, permitted routes. Do not trespass or drive distracted.

CORRECTIONS & CLARIFICATIONS

Tuesday's edition stated that a neighbourhood bench faced absolutely nothing. It faced west. The newspaper regrets the directional oversight.